

Science week : Recount

On Wednesday we did a science experiment called dancing raisins so first we poured water in to a jug and observed what happened with the raisins . The raisins sunk . But when we put the raisins into the clear fizzy drink the raisins went up and down and it looked like they were dancing .

Later that day we went to a man named John and I got to hold a tarantula and a snake but some people didn't want to.

Today Thursday we did another experiment and we made lava lamps.

Tomorrow we are going to the library to see lego robotics. So far I have liked Science week but I think the lego will be the best part.